Loyal Irish Father.

It is certain that no immigrant is more loyal to wife and child than the Irishman. Out of nearly ten thousand charity cases in which a wife was the head of the family, the greatest frequency of widowhood, and the least frequency of desertion or separation is among the Irish—The Century.

Always Continue to Hope.

We do not command ourselves to hope. We just hope. It is a part of our vitality. It lifts, inspires, nerves us. It is as indefinite as life itself. It is an inseparable function of a sound mind. The ceaseless struggle of hope, on the invisible battlefield of the mind, is one of the wonders of creation.

High School Department

Jefferson Davis Literary Society.

By High School Pupils.

At the beginning of the school work this year, the efficient teachers of the High school saw the need of school spirit and good fellowship; hoping to create such a spirit and at the same time to teach the value of self-confidence, two literary societies were planned.

Two leaders were chosen from the senior class, LaPerle Crigler and Dora E. Connor, who claimed by name the members to belong to each society.

The election of officers was made by ballot and the following were elected: President, Dora Evelyn Connor. Vice-President, Marguerite Brown. Secretary, Pamela Yates. Critic, Edna Cline. Sergeant at arms, Deale Binion.

When the time came for the choice of a name, that loved name of Jefferson Davis was suggested and at once chosen.

In naming the society for the grand old man of Mississippi, who loved the disgrace of imprisonment with the fortitude and dignity of a true hero, who has given to the South a luster in the galaxy of heroes that the world must recognize. The society has honored itself in no small way and must endeavor to do credit to our loved man of sorrow.

The members of the Jefferson Davis society are:

Dora Evelyn Connor	Marguerite Brown
Edna Cline	Pamela Yates
Ed Hale	Deale Binion
Louise Allen	Mose Farmer
Albert Hughes	Ellis Hunter
Louise Hunter	Ruth Holt
Sallie Jackson	D. D. Jordan
Ancl Lindley	Arthur Meeks
Winfield Meeks	Minor Mauldin
Elma Morgan	Lola Meriwether
Nancy Patty	Howard Swann
Ella May Taylor	Danell Yates.

Woodrow Wilson Literary Society

By High School Pupils.

Members of the Macon High school classes having met together Friday, Oct. 1st, for the purpose of organizing a literary and debating society, makes further announcement to this effect:

The society shall be known as the Woodrow Wilson Society in honor of this great Statesman who commands admiration for his great deeds and his scholarly mind.

The object of this society shall be the study of good literature, to promote reasoning and argumentative powers and lend the necessary grace and poise to its members which will enable them to meet the great issues of life in a masterful manner. It will also kindle and nourish the flame of school spirit, which will still glow in the hearts of its members in the years to come.

Officers were elected as follows: President, LaPerle Crigler. Vice-President, Virginia Morgan. Secretary, Ellenor Shannon. Treasurer, Joe Shelton. Critic, Duvergne Drake. Sergeant at arms, Finis Carleton.

A joint meeting of both societies was held Oct. 15th in which the oath of office was taken by officers elected and after an interesting program was given the meeting adjourned.

The members of the Woodrow Wilson society are:

Crayton Allen	LaPerle Crigler
Finis Carleton	Frances Dent
Durligne Drake	Nellie Douglass
Knox Douglass	Tom Douglass
Elisha Dorroh	Henry Evans
Mary Harlison	Rosetta Holberg
Julia Holberg	Adelaide Hale
Leonard Hubbard	Mary Murphey
Margaret McCullar	Virginia Morgan
Warren Martin	Elizabeth Stewart
Ellenor Shannon	Nelson Shorrod
Walter Stokes	Turner Stennis
Joe Shelton	Lulu B Williams
Nannie Belle Walthell.

She's Here.

Having braved the rigors of summer by the use of heavy furs, he's back again, ready for a strenuous winter. With the first autumn winds she shows how well she is fitted for the struggle.

In the early morning you can find her on the street cars chatting away between, or among divers. You know cold weather is coming—albeit you have not felt the blasts yourself—for the reason that she wears a low-neck dress. You feel yourself getting ready for a long cold spell, for she wears no furs. Lately she has adopted the Russian bath-towel effect, thrown over one shoulder, but that is because the summer still lags.

As soon as it gets reasonably cold she will discard that heat producer. She is wearing shorter skirts. For be it from her to be caught some cold morning with her lower limbs covered. It may drop to the freezing point any day now, and she wants to be sure that the frost will not find her smothered under long clothes.

She has furs on the top of her boots. She had to have fur somewhere, and she decided that the shoe tops were the safest place. Furs on the shoes will not generate any extraordinary amount of heat. And then again, in case there should be any great warmth in the fluffy leg adornment she has very properly left a little space between the furs and the lower edge of the skirt. This will give the winds a chance, and the men a subject for conversation. She will cross her "limbs" when the opportunity offers and that, of course, will help things out. With a lace waist she'll be ready for zero at a moment's notice. The young women's name is Miss Dissidence of Dissent.

Every cotton planter should remember: That a twelve million bale cotton crop will bring to the South more money than a seventeen million bale crop. That with corn and oats and hay and meat produced on the plantation sufficient to supply the needs of the plantation, that the returns from the cotton crop is largely velvet—surplus money. The business policy for the planter to adopt and pursue is so plain and clear that it is not necessary to say anything further here.—Bulivar Commercial.

Pointing out that no office comes nearer to the people than that of local postmaster and that the responsibility of choosing persons for this post as done at present imposes a burden on Congressmen, Col. Bryan has suggested that postmasters be selected by popular vote the Postoffice Department reserving the right to prescribe qualifications and to remove for cause.—Yazoo City News.

Home Courtesy.

If your husband and your sons and your brothers treat you with an off-hand ease that is sometimes roughness, pray believe that it is their fashion of showing their regard for you. It may not be wholly that. There is a pleasure in throwing off social trammels, as there is in wearing old clothes, and a man likes to speak loudly or not speak at all, to take quaint attitudes and forget good manners, because such conduct makes him really feel at home.

Men have an instinctive feeling that there is something insincere about little social conventions, that manners are a fence built up to mark our distance from those we do not love, that true affection is rather blighted than fostered by trivial attentions that spring from a thoroughly artificial basis.

Of course that is a mistake. Courtesy is only consideration for others, and lack of courtesy and any ease that comes from it are founded primarily in consideration for oneself. The theory that courtesy should be dropped at home really means that we do not need to consider those we love as much as we consider strangers. To seat your mother at the table, or stoop to pick up her handkerchief or tie her shoe, to put an amiable inflection into your voice when you speak to your sisters, will please them, you may be sure. Do you not wish to please them?

And courtesy not only springs from consideration, but produces it. To be courteous, you must be watchful. With a girl to whom you have just been introduced, you are watchful; you have to be. To be watchful with your mother and sisters will mean very little effort for you, and you will be surprised to find how much pleasure and comfort it means to them. You will see it in their faces.

Real courtesy is a habit of the heart. If we practice it at home, it will not seem insincere when we go abroad, for it will not be insincere.—Exchange.

Song.

Song has wielded a strange power in human history; it seduces men from their homes to the field, it consoles those they leave behind, it voices the moods of the lover, the cynic, the drunkard, the puritan, the maiden, and the grandam; cowherds and scholars, hussars and children, all, all. There are songs about nearly every imaginable thing on earth, except the writing and the reading of articles.—Robert Hughes in Smith's.

Rightly Proud of His Road.

Two Pullman porters, representing different railroads, met off duty and progressed from friendly gossip to heated argument. Their quarrel centered about which one worked for the better road. Their claims, figures and arguments came fast and furious. At last the tall, thin porter settled the dispute with these classic words: "Go on, nigger; we killa mo' people den you fellahs tote."

A Fellow Has To.

A good many bromidiots constantly urge young men to stand on their own feet. It has been our experience that when we began standing on anyone else's feet the fellow owning the other feet mentioned it to us almost immediately.

Splendid Advice.

"If you are looking for real comfort," advises a sensible young woman connected with a western newspaper, "buy your shoes large enough and be careful in the selection of your intimate friends."

PETITION FOR PARDON

Petitioner Addison Scott.

To His Excellency, the Honorable Earl Brewer, Governor of the State of Mississippi:

Your Excellency that at the August term of the Circuit Court of N. B. County, Mississippi, in the year 1914, that he was tried and convicted of Grand Larceny and was sentenced to the State Penitentiary for a term of seven years.

Petitioner states that since that time, he has been serving his sentence without murmur, and he has endeavored to do all in his power, in a humble way everything that has been required of him.

While under the laws of the State of Mississippi, this unfortunate man was technically guilty of the crime charged, but in view of the fact that he was unable to employ County Counsel did he have any friends to be present with him in the trial of his case, it is believed that his sentence was much heavier than it would have been otherwise. Your petitioner further shows that in the eyes of the law, he being an ignorant negro does not really know the extent of his accountability, but he feels that he has been sufficiently punished for the part that he took in this unfortunate affair.

That he has been in the service of the State of Mississippi for a period of eighteen months or more, that during the entire time that he has given the authorities absolutely no trouble whatever, and believing that his punishment from a sense of humanity, has already been ample punishment for the past that he took in this unfortunate affair.

Wherefore he earnestly prays that Your Excellency to grant him a pardon, assuring your Excellency that it shall be his endeavor, in the
